

Dustproof and explosion-proof distribution boxes custom-made in factory

AI Overview

Dustproof and explosion-proof distribution boxes are custom-engineered enclosures designed to safely contain electrical components in hazardous environments, using robust materials, precise sealing, and certified explosion-protection standards. Materials and Construction Explosion-proof and dustproof distribution boxes are typically manufactured from stainless steel (AISI 304L or 316L) or glass-reinforced polyester (GRP) to ensure mechanical strength, corrosion resistance, and durability under extreme conditions. Wall thickness and structural reinforcement are carefully calculated to withstand potential internal explosions, while flame paths are engineered to cool escaping gases below ignition temperatures. For dustproofing, enclosures are sealed with advanced gaskets or polyurethane/silicone foams, achieving IP66/67/68 ratings to prevent ingress of dust, water, and corrosive substances. Explosion Protection Standards Manufacturers design these boxes according to ATEX and IECEx directives, which define requirements for equipment in explosive atmospheres. Common protection types include: Ex d (flameproof): Enclosures contain internal explosions and prevent ignition of external atmospheres. Ex e (increased safety): Electrical components are designed to prevent sparks or excessive heat. Ex i (intrinsically safe): Circuits are limited in energy to prevent ignition. Ex p (pressurized housing): Enclosures maintain a positive pressure to keep hazardous gases out. Design and Assembly Distribution boxes are custom-configured to meet specific industrial requirements, including the number of terminals, operators, and cable glands. Components such as motor starters, switch...
