

Finnish Outdoor High Voltage Distribution Box Manufacturer

AI Overview

Key Finnish manufacturers and suppliers of outdoor high-voltage distribution boxes include VEO Electrification Technology, NEPower, Electric Power Finland Oy (EPF), and Voimatel. VEO Electrification Technology is one of the largest turnkey suppliers of substations in the Nordic countries, providing medium and high-voltage solutions up to 400 kV. Their modular substation concept includes predesigned, proven solutions for outdoor high-voltage distribution, ensuring safe and sustainable operations. VEO is an approved A-class supplier to Finland's transmission system operator, Fingrid, and offers intelligent control, protection, and distribution solutions for regional networks and national grids. NEPower specializes in electrical engineering solutions for industrial clients, including the installation of medium-voltage switchgear, substations, and transformer buildings. They also focus on sustainable energy solutions such as solar and wind power, making them a versatile provider for outdoor high-voltage distribution projects. Electric Power Finland Oy (EPF) provides comprehensive electrical distribution services, covering design, implementation, and project management for transformer buildings and railway electrification projects. Their expertise includes high-voltage distribution systems suitable for outdoor installation, tailored to diverse industrial and infrastructure needs. Voimatel is a Finnish-owned service provider specializing in lifecycle services for electrical power networks, including high-voltage distribution. They serve major operators and industrial clients in the Baltic and Central European regions, offering solutions for outdoor substations and distribution boxes. Additional Considerations In Finland, high-voltage distribution networks typically operate at 110 kV, with substations converting this to medium and low voltages for regional and lo...
