

Price of acrylic sheet for distribution boxes

AI Overview

Acrylic sheets for distribution boxes typically range from $18 to $279 per sheet depending on size, thickness, and type (cast or extruded). Pricing Overview Small cut-to-size sheets (e.g., 18" x 24", 1/16" to 1/8" thick) are priced around $18-$45 at retail outlets like Home Depot and Amazon. Medium sheets (e.g., 24" x 48", 1/4" thick) cost approximately $87-$179 depending on whether they are cast or extruded. Large full sheets (e.g., 48" x 96", 1/4" thick) can range from $156-$279, with premium cast acrylic being at the higher end due to superior optical clarity and thermal stability. Bulk or wholesale orders can reduce the per-sheet cost, especially for standard clear or colored acrylic sheets, with suppliers like Regal Plastics, A&C Plastics, and ePlastics offering competitive pricing for large quantities. Types and Considerations Cast Acrylic: Higher quality, better optical clarity, more heat-resistant, ideal for precision applications like distribution box covers. Extruded Acrylic: More affordable, easier to cut and thermoform, suitable for general protective panels. Specialty Options: UV-filtering, non-glare, frosted, or bullet-resistant sheets are available for enhanced durability and safety, though they cost more. Sizing and Thickness Common thicknesses for distribution boxes range from 3mm (1/8") to 6mm (1/4"), balancing strength and weight. Standard sheet sizes include 24" x 48", 36" x 72", and 48" x 96", with cut-to-size options available to minimize waste and shipping costs. Additional Notes Acrylic sheets are lightweight, impact-resistant, and UV-stable, making them suitable for indoor and outdoor distribution boxes. Ordering cut-to-size sheets can save on labor and reduce installation time, especially for custom enclosures. Shipping costs may vary depending on sheet size and thickness; some suppliers offer free freight for certain quantities. For distribution box applications, a...
